

POETRY.

We've all our Angel-Side.

Despair not of the better part
That lies in human kind—
A gleam of light still flickereth
In e'er the darkest mind:
The savage with his club of war,
The sage so mild and good,
Are link'd in firm, eternal bonds,
Of common brotherhood.
Despair not! Oh! despair not then,
For through this world so wide,
No nature is so demon-like,
But there's an angel-side.

The huge rough stones from out the mine,
Unslightly and unfair,
Have veins of purest metal hid
Beneath the surface there:
Few rocks so bare but to their heights
Some tiny moss-plant clings,
And round the pecks, so desolate,
The sea-bird sits and sings.
Believe me too, that rugged souls,
Beneath their rudeness hide
Much that is beautiful and good—
We've all our Angel-side.

In all there is an inner depth—
A far off, secret way,
Where, through dim windows of the soul,
God sends His smiling ray:
In every human heart there is
A faithful sounding chord,
That may be struck, unknown to us,
By some sweet loving word:
The wayward heart in vain may try
Its softer thoughts to hide,
Some unexpected tone reveals
It has its Angel-side.

Despised, and low, and trodden down,
Dark with the shade of sin,
Declining not those halo-lights
Which God hath lit within:
Groping about in utmost night,
For poison'd souls there are,
Who guess not what life's meaning is,
Nor dream of heaven afar.
Oh! that some gentle hand of love
Their tumbling steps would guide,
And show them that, amidst it all,
Life has its Angel-side.

Brutal, and mean, and dark enough,
God knows, some natures are,
But His compassion, comes near
And shall we stand afar?
Our crust of oil will not grow less,
If shared with hearty hand,
And words of peace and looks of love
Few natures can withstand.
Love is the mighty conqueror—
Love is the beautiful guide—
Love, with her beaming eye, can see
We've all our Angel-side.

GLEANINGS.

The True Lady.

The editor of the Portland Eclectic, in the course of an Essay upon the Ladies, tells the following interesting and instructive tale, which we commend to our accomplished lady readers:

We once knew a "young lady" who lived in fine style. Her parlors were elegantly furnished, and her dress was always of the latest fashion.—She had her piano and her teacher, and she played Italian music charmingly. In all the exquisite graces of life she was faultless. She had a rich vein of sentiment, too, and could talk philosophy, or discuss standard authors, at pleasure. Of course she read novels—in fact, a large portion of the day was devoted to that interesting and instructive class of political literature.—She was also somewhat industrious, for she would occasionally work elegant embroidery.—With an abundance of curls, that floated over her neck in beautiful profusion, a fine form, hands white and delicate, large powers of conversation in the usual drawing-room style, she was followed by the young men of taste. Yet, somehow, she never got married. The "beaux" fluttered around her like flies over a pot of honey, but they were very careful not to be caught, as those other insects are apt to be. Their attentions were never so particular as to require some "friend of the family" to demand what were their intentions. This was no fault of the young lady. She was in the market as plainly as though she had inscribed on her forehead, "A HUSBAND WANTED; for particulars inquire within." But the husband never, to our knowledge, came; and we believe that at this day, she is a disconsolate old maid.

What was the trouble? Step with us into the kitchen. That fat woman, with a red face, is the servant of the house. She does the cooking, the washing and the chamber-work. From early dawn until late at night, she is a slave.—Well, that woman is our charming young lady's mother! She never sees her daughter's "callers." If, by accident, she should drop into the parlor while visitors were present, she would hasten out again, with embarrassed manner, looking as though she had committed an offence, while her own child's face would be suffused with blushes.

Now take a walk with us. In that workshop do you see that hard-working mechanic? The wrinkles are hardened over his face, and the gray hairs are thinly sprinkled over his head.—He looks anxious, as though his heart-string tugged at some deep sorrow and mortification. He is the father of our beautiful "young lady," and his hard earnings for many years have been absorbed in the expensive luxuries that her admirable taste has craved. He, too, is excluded from the society of his own daughter.

She moves in a circle above her parents, and, in short, is ashamed of them. They live in the kitchen—she in the parlor. They drudge—she reaps the fruit. She has no pulsation of gratitude for all this. She despises them, and, in fashionable gatherings, is among the first to curl her pretty lips at "low mechanics," provided she can do it safely.

Is she a true lady? No—ten thousand times No! We object not to her accomplishments—to her taste in dress—to her manners. We look upon and admire such, just as we do a superb statue of Venus. As a work of art, it is beautiful; but, nevertheless, it is insensate marble, having no soul, being of no use in practical life, and good for nothing, but to look at.

The beauty of the mind is the true beauty; and the affectionate daughter who nestles herself lovingly into the heart of hearts of her parents—who makes her mother her companion and confidante—who not only works with that mother, but takes the heaviest burden upon herself—she is the true lady. She may never have struck a note upon the piano, yet her house is melodious with harmony, such as angels sing.—Her exterior may be humble, but her interior life is clothed in the vestments of immortal beauty.

There are many "young ladies" whose whole character is on the surface. Dress, manners, accomplishments, all are external. They have no depth of thought, no moral strength, no heart.—They are "outsiders." When the scorching fires of adversity burn beneath the surface, there are no protecting walls appeared within. The whole becomes a heap of ashes, though it may retain the semblance of humanity.

The true lady cultivates the higher nature.—She is religious, but not fanatical—courtous, but not fawning. Reposing serenely upon the arm of her Heavenly Father, and associating with unseen angelic spirits, she meets the storm with calmness, and accepts it as a disciplinary mercy. Her sympathy ever pulsates to the cry of suffering, and her hand is ever open to relieve.—She is beautiful at home, beautiful at the bedside of the sick, beautiful through life, beautiful at the hour of her departure into the world of spirits, and transcendantly and eternally beautiful in heaven.

That is the true lady.
